PASSPORT, VISA REQUIREMENTS, TRAVEL INSURANCE

All visitors to China must hold valid passports and a Chinese visa. Participants are responsible for obtaining the necessary visas to enter China, and for the purchase of insurance that may be necessary in respect of any personal loss, injury or damage associated with attendance at the meeting. Free health care is not available to non-residents of China and participants are strongly advised to arrange travel and health insurance prior to departure.

The weather in Shanghai in October usually warm and pleasant with daytime temperatures of 20-25 °C , dropping to 10-15 °C at night. Lightweight clothing such as short sleeves and cotton dresses are recommended for the daytime but a light jacket or sweater is desirable at night.

PUDONG AND HONGQIAO INTERNATIONAL AIRPORTS

Shanghai is served by two international airports, Pudong and Hongqiao. Most international flights and some domestic flights use Pudong International Airport that is located 40 km from the Nanjiao Hotel. Bus services operate from the airport to different parts of the city, and a taxi to the conference venue and nearby hotels will cost about 200 Yuan. The airport is also served by the high speed Maglev train that runs between the airport and Longyang Road Metro Station. The journey takes approximately eight minutes at speeds reaching 431 km per hour, and costs 40 Yuan one way. Some domestic flights arrive at Hongqiao Airport which is located in the west of Shanghai, 36 km from the Nanjiao Hotel. A taxi from Hongqiao Airport to the Nanjiao Hotel will cost approximately 150 Yuan.
